Those Not On The Candidates List, Will Be Deployed To Government: President

President Chamisa has moved to dispel a vicious disinformation campaign that seeks to suggest that high profile politicians who find their names missing from the candidates list - have been rejected by the

CCC. President Chamisa addressed an impromptu press briefing outside the ZEC Nomination Court yesterday, saying that the CCC has got many years of experience in many Change Champions in Parliament and government, and anyone who did not see the names of some of the big names in the candidates list - should not think that the party was doing away with some of its stalwarts.

"We have got plans for everybody, and some of the big names that you do not see in the candidates list for MPs - are going to government, said the President.

His comments came in to dispel some of the propaganda coming from the ruling party corridors which sought to paint a picture of a CCC that was struggling to field candidates for the August 23 election.

FAZ, ZEC Implicated In Fake Double Candidates Scandal In CCC Nominations Process

By Citizens' Daily Bulletin Correspondent

The Citizens Coalition for Change (CCC) led by Advocate Nelson Chamisa is currently under fire, as it has been accused of putting double council and parliamentary candidates in the nomination court process which was conducted on Wednesday.

However, an investigation conducted by our team revealed that the notorious Zanu PF outfit, Forever Associates of Zimbabwe (FAZ), created these fake double candidates to confuse the CCC electorate in the upcoming elections.

This revelation has uncovered fraudulent activities and highlighted the collusion between FAZ and the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission (ZEC).

Upon receiving news of the double candidates list being circulated, it left many people, including myself, bewildered, especially after the unfortunate events at the Bulawayo nomination court which was later on resolved by the CCC team.

The list which is doing rounds on social media features at least 9 constituencies in Ha-rare with multiple candidates representing CCC. The first question raised was: how did this happen?

There are various opinions, with some attributing blame to CCC incompetence and yet the facts prove otherwise.

Our investigation found that if we compare the list which is doing rounds on the social media with the CCC shortlist released on Monday which had top three shortlisted candidates, none of the names that appeared on the double candidates list was present in the CCC shortlist. This has led to the question: where did the double candidates come from?

The findings show that the fake double candidates have been created by FAZ to target the CCC electorate and cause confusion.

According to our investigation, they created fake signatures and CCC party logo to achieve their illegal and fraudulent activities. The purpose was to confuse voters and discourage them from supporting the genuine CCC candidates in the upcoming elections.

Further investigation found that FAZ colluded with ZEC, which raises concerns about the electoral process's transparency and fairness.

This collusion between political parties and electoral bodies is unacceptable and can undermine the integrity of the electoral process.

While it is essential that CCC takes more responsibility for actions that are related to them, it is also important to note that FAZ and ZEC have played their part in this fraudulent scheme.

CCC must come forward and disown these fake double candidates to clear confusion and speculation amongst the electorate.

The party must also take more responsibility for their own mistakes and work to rectify them to ensure a big victory for the party. FAZ and ZEC must also taken to court for their actions to ensure a fair and transparent electoral process.

The investigation has revealed that FAZ is largely responsible for creating fake double candidates to confuse the CCC electorate.

This has exposed fraudulent activities and collusive practices between political parties and electoral bodies, which can undermine the integrity of the electoral process.

CCC must take responsibility to disown these fake candidates, while also taking Leah Al action against candidates implicated in this criminal activity.

Zimbabwe Election 2023: All You Need To Know

By BBC

Zimbabwe heads to the polls on August 23 against a backdrop of one of the world's highest rates of inflation and accusations of an intensifying crackdown on the opposition.

Long-time president Robert Mugabe was deposed in 2017 but many say that little has changed.

In the run-up to the vote, questions linger over how free and fair the ballot will be in a country that is trying to rehabilitate its image.

Date of the elections?

Zimbabweans will vote on 23 August to elect councillors, members of parliament, and a president. If there is no outright winner in the presidential contest, a run-off will be held six weeks later, on 2 October.

Who is running for president?

The final list of candidates is being confirmed.

In the last election, in 2018, 23 people ran for president, but this time that number is likely to be lower after the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission raised the nomination fee to $20,000 (£16,000) from $1,000 (£800).

There are likely to be two main candidates:

Incumbent Emmerson Mnangagwa, from the governing Zanu-PF party.

Opposition leader Nelson Chamisa, from the Citizen's Coalition for Change (CCC) Mr Mnangagwa, 80, has led Zimbabwe since the military forced Robert Mugabe to resign in 2017, and then won a disputed election a year later. He was a long-time ally of Mugabe before the pair fell out.

Zanu-PF, the governing party, has a lot of support in rural parts of the country Nelson Chamisa, 45, came second in 2018, winning 44% of the vote.

A 2020 court ruling stripped him of the leadership of the main opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) and he subsequently lost access to party assets and state funding.

He formed the CCC in 2022, remains hugely popular in urban areas and is the main face of the opposition.

Other contenders include Saviour Kasukuwere - an exiled former Mugabe ally, Douglas Mwonozora, the MDC's new leader, businesswoman Elisabeth Valerio, whose United Zimbabwe Alliance Party was launched in March 2022, and US-based businessman Robert Chapman - however the chances of any of them winning are slim.

Nomination courts on 21 June will confirm final candidates for all the elections.

Who will win?

Zanu-PF has the advantage of incumbency, state power and access to state resources. The party, which has been in power since independence in 1980, also retains strong support in rural areas.

However with the economy in such a mess, many people, especially those in urban areas and the youth, think it is time for a change.

Rural voters normally turn out in huge numbers, unlike urban and youth voters, which could work against the opposition.

The government has also refused to allow Zimbabweans living abroad to vote - which could also work against Mr Chamisa.

This is the first general election that the CCC will be contesting

Polling so far has predicted different results, so it is hard to use that as a guide as to who may end up president.

Furthermore, human rights activists say that in the past Zanu-PF has used various tactics to stay in power, including violence and intimidation, state-media blackouts and negative coverage of the opposition.

Zanu-PF has previously denied using dirty tricks against its opponents.

What are the main issues?

The cost-of-living crisis continues to be at the core of voters' concerns, with the last three years having been some of the worst in a decade. In the 12 months leading up to May this year, prices rose by 86.5%, one of the highest annual inflation rates in the world.

Meanwhile, businesses are struggling to cope with crippling power outages and an unstable local currency, which lost 86% of its value between January and early June.

Allegations of corruption also remain a source of frustration, with a very low rate of prosecution. During the Covid pandemic, equipment was allegedly procured at inflated prices - the health minister was fired but then exonerated by the courts.

How do the elections work?

For members of parliament and council candidates, the election is won on a first-past-the-post basis - in other words the person who has the most votes.

In the presidential race, however, a candidate needs more than 50% of the vote to be declared the winner, otherwise there will be a run-off election between the top two.

When will we get the results?

By law the presidential election results must be announced within five days after voting ends.

Will they be free and fair?

Civil society groups and the opposition doubt that polls will be free or fair. They cite what they say has been a systemic crackdown on government critics.

The arrests and convictions of opposition figures and government critics has intensified over the last two years.
